What is a Cookie?

Cookies are small pieces of information sent to your computer, and stored on your hard drive.

These pieces of information are then used to improve your experience of our website

A cookie is a small file that is put on your computer.

Cookies cannot be used to identify you personally.

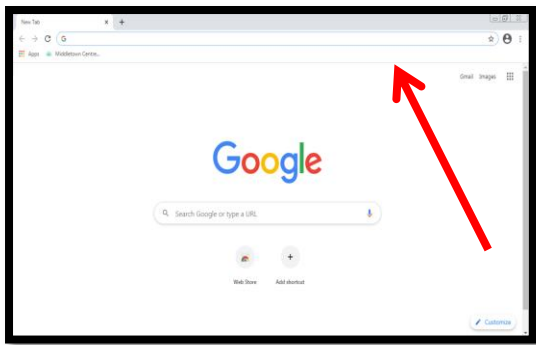

We use cookies to:

- It helps the website to remember your preferences.
- remember certain information about users, so they do not have to give the same information more than once

- recognise if users are already logged in to certain areas of the website
- measure how people use our website so we can improve the way information is provided

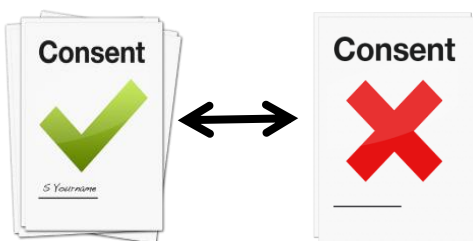

The cookie is placed on your web browser, for example Google Chrome.

The law states that we can store cookies on your device, only if they are necessary for the website to work.

For all other types of cookies we need your permission.

You can change or withdraw your consent from the Cookie Declaration on our website, at any time.
